<w:t>, Brisket, blade oyster, FQ/HQ shin-shank), boneless and frozen. The meat pieces were distributed to storage and ware housing locations in different cities across the country for wholesale or semi-wholesale distribution. The ORVO (Western Regional Meat) of Saida city represents the unique principal source to supply this material. After the cardboard boxes were opened, the plastic packaging bags were disinfected with a mixture of disinfectant products containing 60 ml of ethanol, 10 ml of hydrochloric acid and 30 ml of water. After that, pieces were placed on the cutting machine table, French model (BIRO®), disinfected using the same disinfectant. The cutting machine allows a quick mechanical cutting of meat slices preserving its frozen state. Each sample, purchased from each piece, weighed between 150 to 200 g, was packed in a sterile plastic bag, carefully sealed, labeled, then sent directly to the laboratory.</w:t>

Discussion

The most abundant chemical in meat is water, followed by protein then fat. Carbohydrates, minerals, and vitamins occur on much smaller amounts [3]. In the present study, we assessed the major chemical composition of Brazilian frozen beef imported into Algeria. The changes, observed on fat content in the analyzed meat, were in line with those previously reported [12-14]. It has been suggested that different factors may affect fat content in meat among different pieces such as: breed, production system considered, and for the same animal, according to the piece recovered (i.e. according to the muscle (s) that constitute it) [15-17].

Regarding the protein content, the obtained values agree with those obtained by Normand et al. [3], showing a relatively stable protein content of ruminant meat: about 20g/100 fresh weight, irrespective of muscle, animal type, racial type, or diet. The neck and the blade oyster contained more proteins than the other pieces, which contain lower fat rates (Table 2). Figure 2 highlights those data, where we reported a narrow inversely proportional relationship (R^2 =0.745) between the two constituents. This foodstuff, therefore, represents a fairly stable water content. Similar values were obtained by Clinquart et al. [18]. The observed variations in water content may be due to various factors, such as the age of the animal, although we did not obtain precise data on the age of the slaughtered cattle that constitute the origin of our meat. Meat from young cattle are with high levels of water than from young adults [19,20].

Concerning ash content in analyzed meat, the sources of variation are largely unknown, although dietary supplements in minerals constitute the main factor of variation [3]. Furthermore, this content does not exceed 1-2 g/100 g [

].
The pH values recorded are considered optimal [ 3,18,21
]. The high pH values observed in the analyzed pieces may result from insufficiently acidified meat. Acidification of the post-mortem muscle stops while the pH is still high. The origin of this issue might result in the reduction of glycogen stored in muscles just before slaughter [ 22
]. Factors that are triggered are primarily related to pre-slaughter conditions for prolonged diets or physical expenditures related to grouping of animals. Truckload, transport, slaughterhouse waiting time, and emotional disturbances (stress, fear, pain, etc.) just before death, are factors to consider, all of which can lead to the consumption of the animal and the phenomenon "high pH" [ 18
]. Furthermore, it should be noticed that the period between slaughtering animals, preparing meat (cutting, trimming, deboning, etc.), and freezing is occasionally insufficient for the meat to reach the desired pH.
Unlike the previous ones, PSE meats are labeled with a lower pH and are generally caused by too rapid drop in pH. They are found mostly in beef calves, but unfortunately, we d id not have precise data on the type of animals slaughtered. A study of Mœvi [ 11
] on 100 issues carcasses
to determine the probability of different muscles to be at high pH
showed that the blade bolar is rarely affected (<20 cases/100); the neck is often affected (45 to 75 cases/100); the blade oyster and the shin-shank are very often affected (>75 cases/100). The situation of the brisket was not mentioned in that document.
The most obvious limitation of the study is the undetermined age of investigated animals from which meat was obtained. Microbiological analysis is welcome in further studies.

Conclusion

Physicochemical analyses revealed water and ash contents in variable quantities from which the levels were particularly stable. Lipid contents have values characterizing lean meats. However, the protein fraction was acceptable overall and in the various analyzed pieces. As for pH, the obtained values showed a stability. It is true that freezing is one of the best methods of preserving meat of beef, but it cannot be considered as the best method for preserving mainly for long period s
. Since meat is not an inert substance, during their conservation, it undergoes several physicochemical changes.
